A MYSTERY.

Dead Body of an Unknown Man Found-He is Supposed to Have Been Murdered.

Yesterday while some workmen wer clearing timber from the lands belonging to a Mr. Myers, about eleven miles from the city on the Shepherdsville pike, they discovered a grave containing the skele ton of a man, who had evidently been thrust into the ground in great haste. Information of this strange discovery reaching Mr. Myers, he at once sought to penetrate the mystery. The only glimmer o light so far thrown upon the subject is the imperfect evidence of a negro boy living near the spot. He says that the remains are those of a Georgian, who was murdered and buried in the woods about a year ago by a man named Cooper. The negro failed to give any other information, but the belief is general that the unknown body is that of some man who was foully dealt with.

Mr. Myers came to the city and report ed the facts to Coroner Moore, at the same time requesting him to go out and hold an inquest upon the body. The Coroner deemed it useless to order an inquest un til the matter had been further investigated. Mr. Myers will use every exertion to ferret out the ominous exhumation.

THE COUNTY LEVY-The Magistrates of Jefferson county, Judge Hoke presiding. assembled in the County Court room at 11 o'clock this morning to consider the propriety of tendering the Court-house for the use of the State as a capitol.

Mr. Carnth, a member of the City Coun cil, stated that the General Council had appointed no special committees in regard to the matter, but was satisfied the city was willing to give their interest in the Court-house, fifteen-eighteenths, for the use of the General Assembly.

'Squire Clements was of the opinion that it would be of great benefit to the city if the county and city give their interests in the Court-house, but could not say whether the Justices had the power to give away the county's interest. 'Squire Can non offered the following preamble and

Several of the Board of Justices thought the matter should be consummated, but feared under the law that the Board had no right to make the transfer. The vote being taken, the resolution passed unanimously. A committee of five Justices was then ap pointed to confer with the committee ap pointed by the General Council, and to roceed with them to Frankfort and make the tender should that body concur in the FIRE YESTERDAY MORNING.-At fifteen minutes past two o'clock yesterday morning, two stables, adjoining each other, in the rear of premises 278 and 280 Walnut street, between Hancock and Clay, the property of George Linty and William Gabler, were discovered on fire by Officer Weatherford, who attempted to give the alarm from box 4, corner of Clay and Jefferson, but failed to get it to work. He then ran to the "Weatherford" engine-house, and started that steamer for the scene of confiagration. The alarm was subsequently sounded from box 24, corner of Walnut and Jackson. The "Atwood" and "Watkins" also repaired to the spot, and the three steamers soon subdued the flames. There were several horses and cows in the stable, but they were rescued without being damaged. The loss of Messrs. Linty and Gabler will amount to $1,000, upon which there was no insurance. The fire was unquestionably the work of an incendiary. Officer Weatherford deserves great credit for his promptitude in notifying the engine, and having it started out before the alarm was finally sounded. alarm from box 4, corner of Clay and

A EUST OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN.-We were favored yesterday, with other journalists, with a private view of a bust of the late President Lincoln, which will be publicly uncovered on the 12th of February in the U. Henry, Esq., a sculptor whose work evinces genius, was executed in Italy It is remarkably lifelike as a portrait of Mr. Lincoln, while as an artistic work it is unsurpassed by anything in the West. There seems to us to be a something lacking in expression, but, on the whole, we have rarely seen so natural and so living a representation in marble of a person as this exquisitely executed bust of the late generous-minded President. The artist deserves the warmest praise for his conscientious labor and a hearty recognition of his talent. The bust of Lincoln is a glorious addition to the art treasures of Louisville-all too limited for a city of its wealth and position.

The following is the conclusion reto message of the President: The legislative department derives a superiority in our Government from other circumstances. Its constitutional powers being at once more extensive and less susceptible of precise limits, it can with the greater facility mask, under complicated and indirect measures, the encroach-ments which it makes on the co-ordinate departments. On the other side, the exive power being restrained within a narrower compass and being more simple in its nature, and the judiciary being described by land-marks still less u defeat themselves. Nor is this all. has, in some constitutions, and in all a prevailing influence, over the pecuniary rewards of these composing other departments, a dependence is thus created in the latter which gives still cised by a plurality of hands, and not by a single one. One hundred and seventy-three despots would surely be as oppres-sive as one. And little will it avail us that they were chosen by ourselves. An elective despotism was not the Government we fought for, but one which should the several bodies of magistracy as that no one could transcend their legal limit without being effectually checked and restrain-

For this reason that Convention which ssed the ordinance of Government laid s foundation on this basis, that the legislative, executive, and judiciary depart-ments should be separate and distinct, so hat no person thould exercise the powers of more than one of them at the time. But no barrier was provided be tween these several powers. The judiciary and executive members wer eir continuance in it. If, therefore, the egislative assumes the executive because, in that case, they may put their tory on the other branches. They ha judiciary. Controversy and the direction of the Executive during the whole time of

Mr. Justice Storey, in his commentaries on the Constitution, reviews the same sub-ject, and says "the truth is that legislative n every free government."

The representatives of the people will watch the encroachments of these repre-sentatives themselves? Will they be as jealous of the exercise of power by them selves as by others? There are many resons which may be assigned for the engrossing influence of the legislative de partment. In the first place, its constitu imits that those of either of the other departments. The bounds of Ex known. It cannot transcend the hout being brought in contact with ot er departments. Laws may check and re marks apply with still greater force to Mr. Wentworth introduced the followhowever general and unlimited. tions are necessarily confined to the mere administration of private and pu cannot create controversies to act up-on. It can decide only upon rights and cases as they are brought by others isters them, is subjected to the power of impeachment. On the other hand the ative power, except in the few cases e legislative power, except in the few cases of constitutional prohibition, is forever varying its means and its ends. It governs the institutions and law and public policy of the country; it regulates all its vast interests; it disposes of all its property. Look but at the exercise of two or three branches of its ordinary powers. It levies all taxes; its directs and appropriates all supplies; it gives rules for the descent and distribution of all property held by individuals; it controls sources and resources of wealth; it changes at its held by individuals; it controls sources and resources of wealth; it changes at its will the whole fabric of laws; it molds at its pleasure almost all the institutions which give strength and comfort and dignity to society. In the next place, it is the direct, visible representative of the will of the people in all changes of time and circumstances. It has the pride as well as power of the numbers. It is easily moved, and steadily moved by the red, and steadily moved, by th strong impulse of popular feeling and popular odium. It obeys, without reluct-ance, the wishes and will of the majority for the time being.

The path to public favor lies open by such obedience, and it finds not only support but immunity in whatever measures the majority advises, even though they transcend the constitutional limits. It has no motive, therefore, to be jeal as no mouve, therefore, to be jeafous or serupulous in its own use of power, and it finds its ambition stimulated and its arm strengthened by the countenance and courage of numbers. These views are not alone those of men who look with apprehension upon the fate of republics, but they are also freely admitted by several they are also freely admitted by some of the strongest advocates for popular rights and the permanency of republican insti-tutions. Each department should have a will of its own. Each should have its own dependence secured beyond the power of being taken away by either or both of the others. But, at the same time, the tions of each to the other should be so strong that there should be a mutual inmeans, but personal motives to resist en-creachments of one or either of the others. Thus ambition would be made to coun-power. The advocates of either are alike the enemies of the Union and of our constitutional form of government.

This was succeeded by the regular toasts, to which responses were made by Senators Hendricks, Doolittle, Cowan, Judge Black and others. The festivities continued until a late hour

Check power, and the pressure of interest to balance an opposing interest. The Judiciary is naturally and almost necessarily department. It can have no means of influence by patronage. Its powers can never be wielded for itself. It has no command over the purse or sword of the nation. It can neither levy takes nor appoint to office. It is never brought into contact with the people by constant speaking the controversies or in trials and punishments. Its rigid justice and impartiality give it no claims to favor, however they may to respect.

It stands solitary and unsupported, except by that portion of public opinion which is interested only in the strict administration of justice. It can scarcely secure the sympathy or zealous support either of the executive or legislative if they are not, as is not unfrequently the

If any department of the Government it certainly has not been either the Execu-tive or Judiciary. In addition to what has been said by these distinguished writers, it may also be urged that the dominant party in each House may, by the expulsion of sufficient members, or by exclusion from representation of a requisite number of States, reduce the minority to less than one-third. Congress, by these means, might be enabled to pass a law, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding, which would render impotent the other two departments of the Government, and make inop-erative the wholesome and restraining power which it was intended by the framers of the Constitution should be exerted by them. This would be a practical concentration of all power in the Congress of the United States. This, in the language of the author of the Declaration of Independent the teachings of great statesmen and con-stitutional lawyers of the early and later days of the Republic, rather than to rely simply upon an expression of my own

It is not a time favorable to that calm institutions are to be made. The mea-sure now before me is one of those changes. It initiates an untried experiment for a people who have said, with one voice, it is not for their good. This alone should make us pause; but it is not all. The experiment has been tried, or so much as was demanded by the people of the several States, for them-selves. In but few of these States has such an innovation been allowed as giving a ballot to the colored population, out any other qualificat them the denial of a ballot to this race is absolute, by fundamental law placed be-cond the domain of ordinary legislation. n most of these States the e age would be partial; but small as it would be, it is guarded by constitutional barriers. Here the innovation assumes barriers. Here the innovation assumes formidable proportions, which may easily grow to such an extent as to make the white population a subordinate element in the body politic. After full deliberation upon this measure. I can not bring ayself to approve it even upon local con-iderations, nor yet as the beginning of an experiment on a larger scale.

I yield to no one in attachment to that of general suffrage which distinguishes our policy as a nation, but there is a limit, wisely observed hitherto, which makes the ballot a privilege and a trust, and which requires of some classes a time suitable for probation and preparation. To give it indiscriminately to a new class, wholly unprepared by prepared by the control of the ly unprepared by previous habits and ortunities, to perform the trust which opportunities, to perform the trust which it demands is to degrade it, and finally to dectroy its power, for it may be safely as-sumed that no political truth is better es-tablished than that such indiscriminate and all-embracing extension of popular suffrage must end at last in its destruc-tion.
